1. The first part of the paper is devoted to a general introduction of the subject and a statement of the objects of the investigation. It is shown that the problem is of great importance and interest, and that it has not been fully solved. The author then proceeds to a detailed examination of the various methods which have been employed to solve the problem, and shows that each of them has its own merits and demerits. He then proposes a new method, which he claims to be superior to all the others. The second part of the paper is devoted to a detailed description of this new method, and to a demonstration of its validity.
 The author shows that the method is applicable to a wide range of cases, and that it yields results which are in good agreement with those obtained by other methods. The third part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the results obtained, and to a comparison of the new method with the others. The author concludes by stating that the new method is a valuable addition to the arsenal of mathematical tools, and that it deserves to be widely known and used.
